EnerAqua – Sustainable Profitable Growth

COP26, the global climate summit held in Glasgow last autumn, seems a long time ago. Since then the weaponisation of energy following Putin's invasion of Ukraine is causing an energy shortage crisis in Europe. Sadly, the lack of alternative supply is likely a consequence of the blunt application of ESG investing whereby Western energy producers were starved of capital. The societal benefit of supporting transition energy producers such as UK North Sea gas producer Serica Energy is hopefully now more greatly appreciated.

Undoubtedly there is a renewed urgency to accelerate the energy transition to greener – and now potentially cheaper – technologies. Late 2021 IPO EnerAqua Technologies is enjoying sustained rapid and profitable growth fuelled by a burgeoning pipeline of contracts and enquiries driven by government mandate. Local authorities are now eagerly seeking low carbon alternatives to replace end-of-life gas and oil fired boiler systems in council owned blocks – irrespective of macroeconomic conditions. EnerAqua specialises in Ground Source Heat Pumps – a strongly supported technology at COP26 – materially lowering energy bills for tenants.

EnerAqua isn't just about being in the right sector at the right time. Its success has been driven by proprietary technology that lowers system cost by reducing water consumption without end users noticing. This is also driving an acceleration in the global water-saving side of the business, adding to its sustainability credentials. In a sector dominated by loss-making firms, Flagship supported the IPO at 277p which turned out to be a p/e ratio of 11x based on results reported this month. Shares touched a level 22.7% higher after well received results, but market volatility sees them back at the IPO level, still a resilient start to stock market life.
